

Resume

A resume is still the most important job seeking tool. From the time of application or after you have left an interview or cold call, employers will be looking at your details! It's your sales weapon.

It should provide a timeline history of your skills, education, and work history. Ensure that you also list your current referees.

Here are some handy tips for writing your resume:

1. Things like work history and skills can change the length of your resume depending on the job you're applying for, but a 2 to 4-page resume is the standard.
2. Make sure your resume is in an easy-to-read font – Calibri or Arial in size 11 are good choices.
3. Make sure your resume looks the same throughout. Using the same spacing between sections, the same font and sizes makes your resume easier to read.
4. Always start your resume with your name, phone number and email address.
5. Include all the important information that the employer needs to know. For example, any training or past experience that you've had in a similar job.
6. When you're listing your education and work history, it's best to start with your most recent first and work your way backwards.
7. Your referees are the most important part of your resume. These are people that can say you would be good for the job. Always:
 - List at least 2 people.
 - List people that will say good things about you.
 - List people that are not related to you.
 - Tell your referees that they may be getting calls from employers.
 - List your referees most up to date contact information.
8. Get someone else to proofread your resume. Ask them to look at the design, spelling and grammar and give you any suggestions.
9. Save your resume on a USB as well as on your computer and keep it on you. You never know when you will need it.
10. At times you may need to email your resume to an employer. When this happens, save your resume as a PDF instead of a word document. It will send more easily. It's very easy to do, but if you're not sure how, do a quick google or ask someone who can help.
11. Customize your resume for each job you're applying for. Each job needs different skills, if you adjust your resume to match, you will be noticed more easily. Always print your resume on white paper.

Example Resume

Sam Green
XYZ Company
Supervisor
98765 432100

Referees – This is the most important information on the resume, other than your contact details. Before adding a referee to your resume, ASK them if they are willing to act as a referee on your behalf. Let them know about jobs you are applying for and to expect a call from an employer. Use people who will say good things about you, e.g.: previous employers, teachers, sporting associates or community representatives that you know. Do NOT use family members. Include their name and contact number. If relevant include their title and company name.
